EVOLVING

FUSE Magazine is evolving as our foundation strengthens. Combining various forms of art, like photography and now talented writers, FUSE showcases and celebrates women. Through a narrow lens, one might see “sexy” while another sees “classic.” Each photograph entices a different feeling and that is what makes FUSE unique. Along with photography, writers add life to the magazine sharing intimate experiences – whether it be fiction or nonfiction—this form of art adds detail richening the content as an entity. Our dedicated viewers do not go unnoticed. Signing up as a patron gives you VIP access to the magazine before it releases. For further details, please check out how to become a patron.

We are excited as the magazine continues to expand as we stick to our core values—the celebration of beautiful, sexy women from all ends of the spectrum.

Thank you,

XOXO

WHAT IS THE FUTURE OF THE LET'S PLAY?

MODEL: TIA ALEXANDRA

TWITCH: TWITCH.TV/IAMINERTIA

By Tia Alexandra

Our history is full of movements, leaving lasting effects on our culture. From Harlem Jazz, to the Seattle grunge scene in the 1990s, underground collectives of thought and creation have risen to mainstream acclaim with a similar strategy: community through collaboration, all centralized around a common craft. These movements come from areas of hardship, or a background of racial struggle, where it's members tell their stories through expression. Deep in the early days of internet content creation, reaching as far back as flash animation in the early 1990s, a genre of entertainment was born that would merge video games and media. A phenomenon that wasn't started by studio executives or marketing teams, but by nerds getting creative with their own resources. In a future where the next generations are unlocking the potential of cyber-social community, this new form of entertainment looks to overtake cable TV and the big screen. We call it the 'Let's Play'.

So, how do we define a Let's Play? Typically, one or multiple people record themselves playing a videogame for an audience, and derive entertainment value from both the video game itself, and the player's reactions. The movement saw its inception entirely online, with a community centered around the internet and popular culture. PewDiePie, the reigning king of YouTube and most iconic Let's Player, is best known for his high-pitched shrieks while playing horror games. While a major influencer, and one of the first of the genre to gain mainstream appeal, PewDiePie did not begin his YouTube channel until 2010. Two years earlier, Rooster Teeth staff members created a series centered around, "the achievement mechanic found in seventh and eighth generation video game consoles". Achievement Hunters became a staple of the Rooster Teeth brand, integrating gameplay with funny commentary, and one of the first major media sites to coin the term. When speaking about the history of the Let's Play, the genre arguably saw its founding era between 2008-2010.

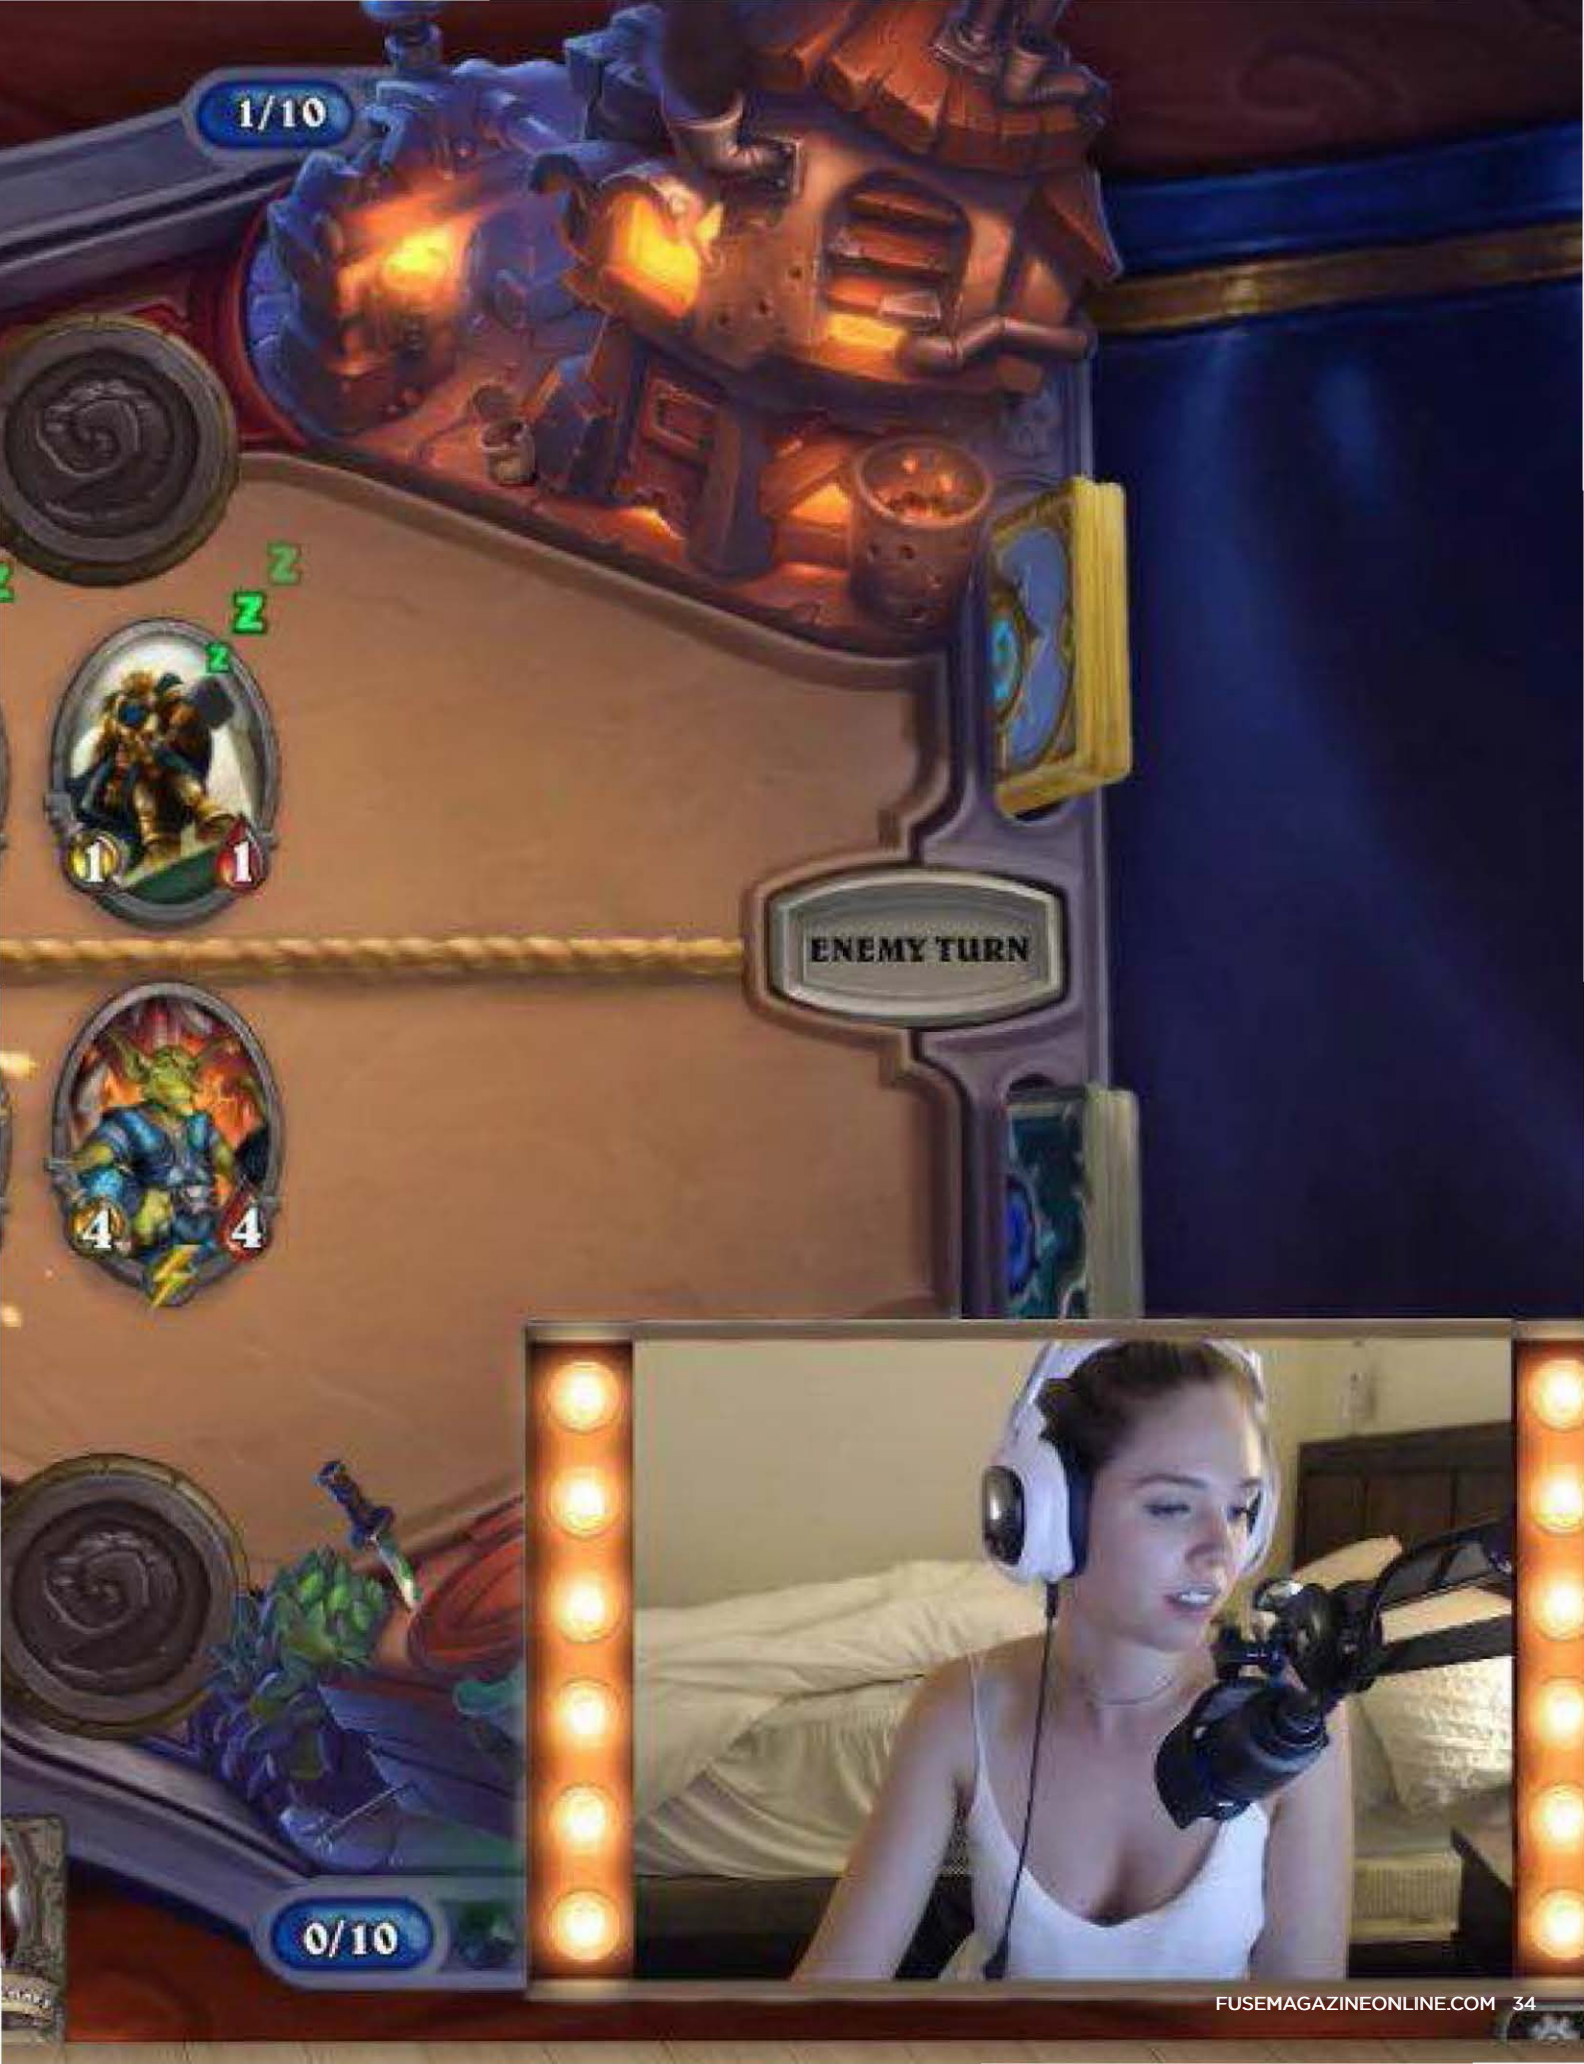

Over the next 2-3 years, individual and collaborative channels rode the gaming media movement to online stardom. Beginning in 2011, content creator Vanoss created a collaborative channel that is currently the 13th most subscribed-to channel on YouTube. 2012 saw the beginnings of solo sensations Markiplier and Jacksepticeye, as well as a Let's Play style channel started by a group of improv comedians and animators known as the Game Grumps. The above mentioned arguably make up the 'first wave' of influential entertainers. Built on the personal simplicity of playing games with friends, these creatives were the first to monetize their videos into addictive entertainment available to all. The genre's explosion of popularity in 2013 prompted sweeping changes throughout the gaming and entertainment industry, inspiring new ways to connect gaming influencers with their audiences.

"In a future where the next generations are unlocking the potential of cyber-social community, this new form of entertainment looks to overtake cable TV and the big screen. We call it the 'Let's Play'."

By identifying notable entertainers by influence and time, the Let's Play movement as a whole can be more accurately traced. During that first growth period between 2010 and 2013, video game entertainers on YouTube were developing an entertainment recipe that would bring back a variety of viewers. Around 2015, genre's explosion into popular culture sparked the beginning of the movement's next phase. The market became saturated with those following the pattern of their idols, creating their own videos within the community. The 'second wave' of the Let's Play movement is marked by the industry's reaction to this new form of media, whether through the growth of gaming broadcasting sites like TwitchTV, or already-successful channels expanding through new media. Whether through Rooster Teeth's stream team, Funhaus, or through more mainstream livestreaming sites, broadcasting has taken on a massive role in Let's Play culture.

Named first after founder, Justin Kan, Justin.tv first began in 2007 as a subject-specific "lifestreaming" website. Along with the rise of the Let's Play movement, gaming quickly became the most popular category on the site. Around the same time of the gaming content boom of 2011, TwitchTV was launched as a separate livestreaming site. Over just 3 years, Twitch became the fourth largest source of internet traffic during peak times. From this site alone, internet content creators have found a new platform to grow a following, to which they have access 24/7. TwitchTV added a new element to the Let’s Play genre: that of real time interaction. Streamers have found a way to make a living, some rising to online stardom and threatening to eclipse the masters from only ten years ago. Celebrities in the genre have moved more towards livestreaming, taking advantage of the resource especially for charity fundraising.

“ TwitchTV added a new element to the Let’s Play genre: that of real time interaction. Streamers have found a way to make a living, some rising to online stardom and threatening to eclipse the masters from only ten years ago.”

“Unfortunately, history has a way of repeating itself in the way of many obstacles. Individuals at the height of the craft have faced a wave of scandal... which may have set off a troubling advertiser de-funding trend.”

Rooster Teeth, for example, has seen a drastic evolution since the early days of Achievement Hunters. The company now boasts animated and live action series, podcasts, live streams, and affiliated content groups. One of those groups has grown rapidly in popularity over just the last 2 years. Founded in 2015 by ex-IGN editors and producers, the guys at Kinda Funny Video plays games, host a talk show, produced a podcast, and just wrapped the 3rd annual Kinda Funny Live show in San Francisco. Their content, iconic of the second wave, pushes the envelope of video game entertainment with a wider variety of media than just YouTube videos. This is an exciting time, both to be a video game lover and a content creator. The future of the Let’s Play is being written in the present.

Unfortunately, history has a way of repeating itself in the way of many obstacles. Individuals at the height of the craft have faced a wave of scandal, which has drastically affected the gaming content community as a whole. The King of YouTube himself faced his own scandal earlier this year, which may have set off a troubling advertiser de-funding trend. PewDiePie’s controversy began a dialogue among advertisers, questioning the value of investing in “shocking or offensive” content. Several celebrities in the genre have found themselves in hot water from controversial statements, including Kinda Funny Video’s co-founder, Colin Moriarty. His public resigned amidst backlash from a controversial tweet sparked social discussion over expression and public influence. Unfortunately, this culminated in many content creators losing major sources of revenue. YouTubers continue speaking out about widespread de-monetization and unexplained video removals, going against the site’s “fair use” policy. Remember “#WTFU”? This backlash hashtag (or ‘backlashtag’) was spread by content creators throughout YouTube in 2016 to raise awareness towards widespread unfair treatment by the site. ‘WTFU’ in this context refers to the ‘fair use’ policy in YouTube’s user guidelines, stating that it is not infringement to use copyrighted works under certain criteria. YouTube has repeatedly disregarded this clause, removing user videos with no explanation. This draws back to free speech in internet media and the use of copyrighted material, a discussion which could decide the fate of content online.

The Let’s Play saw it’s roots in gaming and internet culture, a community who values free speech and despises censorship. Pin this against advertisers looking to appease as many consumers as possible, and there is understandable conflict. So, will online censorship, copyright laws, Net Neutrality, or any other factor be responsible for the fall of the genre? All pose a threat, but the answer is for us to decide. As content creators, influencers, executives, and consumers, the future of the Let’s Play rests in all of our hands. Our actions will decide the lasting effect of this media on our culture, and of our culture on this new media.

STRANGE SEX

INTIMATE MOMENTS GONE WRONG

JUST WHEN YOU THINK YOU'RE IN THE CLEAR OF AWKWARD HIGH SCHOOL SEXUAL EXPERIENCES, THEN COME THE COLLEGE YEARS.

By Samantha Weiss

College orientations are required right before fall semester begins to help upcoming Freshman adapt easier to "adulthood." Blanket statement: Orientation is a 2-3 day campus rage where boys scope out girls or girls scope out girls...you know, get acclimated to the lay of the land and who they might lay. And nothing says, "Get to know me!" better than 3,000 hormonal, unmonitored, teenagers forced to attend dance parties to shed light on adulting.

Still recovering, I mean repenting, over the loss of my virginity, sexual activity was placed in the D.A.R.E. category.

"Focus- I must keep my cheerleading scholarship and stay on my trajectory toward law school."

Although, I admit my mind wrestled the idea of strengthening my sex resume vs scholarly disciplinary loner gal tattooed on my flat chest. But I was proud to say I survived the orientation orgy (PG13 style) peer pressure only because no one really talked to me in order to receive peer pressure.

Ok, ok. Yawn. Here come's the twist.

Did I manage to lose forty-two grand, attribute to a professor's arrest, and/or experience physical pain yet pleasure my Freshman year of college?

Absolutely.

Peer pressure ain't got nothin' on stream of consciousness.

First Day of Class

English Lit. 413
Professor Kneely
Tillman Hall: 8:00am M/W/F

M: 7:45am

Walked from the all girl dormitory I resided in to attend my very first collegiate lecture.

The class room was small, not like I imagined from watching Van Wilder, but my spirits remain high as I sat in the front waiting for some basketball players to mosey in.

Fuck me. I'm in an advance literary class with all of 8 people. The people--them being middle aged women commuting back and forth from Charlotte, NC to finish their Bachelor degrees since they failed at my age.

Immediately, the group of cougars gravitate toward each other by means of menopause commonality.

I glare at the clock curious if the professor was even coming when it was 15 minutes past 8.

Losing faith, I gathered my books to leave as the professor coyly slides in.

"Miss Paige, not up to delving deep into stream of consciousness this morning?"

How'd he know my...

"Your father warned me about you. Read his Pulitzer winning book. I have high expectations."

He scanned my body with his glossy eyes. Was he high? Probably. Most writers produce best material in a euphoric state of mind. Or maybe he was mentally photographing. My thoughts began to fog quickly. I couldn't talk or figure out how to react. The professor insisted I sit down in a stern manner the way an owner speaks to its dog. I obeyed.

9am came faster than a 13 year old boy who found his mothers Victoria's Secret catalog in the bathroom. The cougars, already tethered to each other as if we were back in high school finding which click we belong in, kept gossiping over my thoughts as the professor paused the lecture for next meet up.

I could not stop starting at his lips. Us girls love a mysterious man, and we instinctively know if its worth the future pain or not. I wanted his pain. All of it. And for his lips to control when I do something or not.

F: 7:45am Three weeks later

The cougars attended every class, except this mornings class. Me, still without friends, attends every class - in fact I get withdrawal hours after leaving. Weeks go by of memorizing Professor's body language. Fantasizing him kissing me and our subtle touches when I'd turn in papers. My lack of companionship outside class, and I'm certain he's going through similar, has heightened my need for him. He always sits down at his desk, open door for me to flirt and bend over while he explains literary theories. I would dodge events after cheer competitions just to go back to my room and masturbate pretending he was doing it.

"Put all of me in your mouth. But if you gag, I will choke you so hard you will learn your lesson."

"Stand up."

My daydream interrupted by Professor Kneely's tone.

"Is there a spider? I'm confused."

"Did I ask you to speak?"

Knots formed in my throat. He pushed the door nearly shut but still enough to hear the murmur of students in the hall. He took off his blazer while ordering me to slide my panties off but keep my skirt on. He looked mid thirties with his scruff beard - I found myself imagining him licking my Clit gently with the graze of his beard setting me off.

He was anything but gentle.

My boobs, an average B size, didn't turn away men for the most part because the rest of my body (ass) was good enough to erect men's interest, including Professor Kneely. My eyes locked to his as he approached my desk. His hand gripped my neck so tight that my vocal chords couldn't produce a sound. He began to finger me slow as he commanded me to keep my eyes on his. I wanted to moan so loud but when the slightest tremble escaped he gripped tighter. The hallway chatter grew louder while he stuck 2 more fingers in causing me to finish.

"Professor Kneely!"

One of the cougars walked in chipper as much as her estrogen pills allowed asking for his attention. I look down at the floor, heart nearly 150 beats per minute hoping she wouldn't say anything.

His fingers slid out of me even though his body didn't move and our eyes still focused on the other as he stated, "And that's where you get your argumentative side from, Samantha. Your dad. Faulkner eloquently allows us to figure Benjy on our own without blatantly painting it. Simplicity is key in this chapter. Don't dig too deep and get analysis of paralysis."

He made no sense. He slapped the desk and said he can answer questions via email and walked out, wet fingers and all.

W: 7:52am Mid-Term

The cougars laughed their way into the classroom while I was meditating to calm my sexual confusion. I wonder if he does this to other students? Or maybe he likes me? Could we date? What would we talk about other than my dad? Fucking gross. But Profesor Kneely was sexy beyond looks. His power deflected my mind on the pathway to honors student. In fact, I was failing all my classes. I became obsessed with a man I knew nothing about except after class he would force me to get pleased by him. But never me him. Today, I was eager to take charge.

Caroline, one of the cougars, continuously throws herself upon profesor but he has yet to entertain. The women were starting to sense my infatuation toward him -- probably the uncertainty in my voice answering a question he'd ask during class and my face flushed red as a ginger playing at the beach all day with no sunscreen. I mean all 50 minutes of class were used wisely. I would prepare my mind for his aggression to come after the cougars gossiped out their way out of the room.

As they walked out to the hall, I could feel needles tingle down my neck from anxiety built during class today. I wanted to fuck him.

I stood up pushed him back from me and unbuckled his belt.

"Put all of me in your mouth. But if you gag, I will choke you so hard you will learn your lesson."

I knelt down, spitting on both my hands to stroke him. While stroking, I put him all the way to the back of my throat humming, "mmmm."

"I'm going to cum on your face and you are going to lick every ounce up. Do you hear me?" As he pulled my hair up so my face looked up to him. I nod.

The door cracked.

"Keep fucking going. You are such a good girl. God, you're amazing."

I ignored the door. Usually, the mass communication class congregated outside until 9:15 at least.

"I love when you look at me."

Love? Wait, are we a thing? My mind was 100 miles an hour unclear of how I felt. I enjoyed the mystery and now his words of affirmation made me want him even more. Sex life on fire and now adding feelings? Could this get any better?

"Don't stop. You look at me while you suck me hard. NOW."

"Professor Kneely?"

His cum dripped down my loose shirt and I wanted to lick it up.

And then reality struck.

Caroline was recording the whole time.

Police left Tillman Hall around 4pm that afternoon with a cuffed Kneely.

I expressed that I did not want to file charges. Two days post class bondage and a thousand dollar jail bond released Professor Kneely.

Six failed classes, two lost scholarships and a bruised neck left me to go home with a life lesson that no Faulkner enthusiast could analyze and understand.

My resume was much richer than any other freshman student there.

This photo shoot has been a fun and luxurious one to do because everyone on the team love exotic sport cars. The original idea for the shoot is to show case young and luxurious lifestyle. It has definitely come to my recognition that there are many more younger generation nowadays whom have been born into wealth and many of them live an extravagant lifestyle. The entire shoot took us about 3 weeks from planning to the final stage in post. Special thanks to the guys from Muse Auto Sport and Vancouver Motor Cars for providing the brand new 2017 Porsche 911 Turbo S for the shoot. And special thanks to Joel Baziuk from the Steveston Harbour Authority for kindly providing us the location.

CHAPTER TWO:

CIDER ESTATES

By Setecia A. Crawford

Cider Estates has really proven to be a wealthy neighbourhood. Jabir allows me to drive one of his escalades occasionally and I take luxurious bathes each night. The sun was set for the evening as the skies made a beautiful peachy-orange colour. A knock tapped softly on my door. I answered it cautiously while tying my silky black robe in a knot. It was Jay coming to collect his payment.

"Hey Roxie! Are you enjoying your new home?" he asked me happily while leaning up against the white wall, his cologne created goosebumps on my neck and was making my nipples erect with excitement. He sported a pair of black dress pants and a black leather jacket tonight, "Yes I am... thank you!" I said returning the enthusiasm while ushering him into the large basement unit.

The atmosphere was getting warmer now as he stared into my brown eyes intently. The interior walls have a rustique look, decorated with red brick. The white leather couch and flat screen television were by the furthest wall and the fireplace was crackling. Laying before the fire was a white and brown bear skin rug, "Roxie, would you like to have dinner with me tonight? My wife just went to Dubai for the week..." he stared at me anxiously, using hand gestures. It was kind of adorable how he instantly became a nervous wreck in front of me.

"Are you sure you want to have dinner? We can skip that part..." I smiled coyly, advancing towards him and slowly unzipping his jacket. His hands reached down and cupped my ass. I sighed as he pulled me in close, I could feel his dick growing through his dress pants. I grabbed him by his leather jacket and planted an undisclosed kiss on his plump lips.

He closed the front door and started to push me into the living room. I sat on the leather couch and unzipped his pants, pulling out his long hard cock. I started massaging his balls and slobbering on his shaft, "Oh! God! Don't stop..." he whispered under his breath, groaning impatiently. He looked down at me barely keeping it together. His hips were jerking abruptly as his cock hit the back of my throat making me choke and gag, "Mmm... atta girl!" he said as I spat saliva onto his hard cock and bobbed my head back and forth.

The bright yellow fire had shadows dancing all around us as I started playing with myself under my silky robe on the white couch. The feeling of the bear-skin rug under my feet was making me pleasantly wet. I stood up and he untied my black silk robe, revealing my naked body.

Suddenly, he reached down to play in my wetness, making me moan softly, "Oh Jay, touch me" I sighed, he obeyed my command and shoved two fingers up my vagina, I screamed out in bliss, "Ahh! Yes!" I cried as my hips writhed underneath his hand. His other hand cupped my ass and squeezed it tightly. His mouth licked my breasts and tugged on my nipples, "Mmm...baby" I moaned.

Jay seemed like he missed the smell and touch of my body so much. He pulled me down onto the ground and our bodies collapsed onto the bear skin rug. The fire crackled beside us and I climbed up onto of him, inserting his big cock. He instantly started to fuck me very hard, "JAY! (SIGH) FUCK ME!" I screamed into the fire place while holding onto his shoulders for dear life. My breasts were flailing in mid-air and his hands gripped onto my hips, "I'm cumming...baby!" I wailed into the atmosphere.

Tears rolled down my cheeks from the euphoric feeling. He stopped riding me and turned me around so he could fuck me doggy style. I obediently pronounced my ass in the air and he entered me from behind. Again, he immediately fucked me, violently pulling on my brown hair, "OH! GOD!" I cried, my body apparently loved it and I started screaming like crazy again, "OH! JAY!" I shouted while he slammed into my pussy, "Mmm..." he groaned while we fucked on all fours.

The rug was so smooth, feeling like royalty under our hands and knees. Jay bucked his hips and spanked my ass hard, "Spank me... Again!" I shouted. He did as he was told, "Yes! (SIGH) Roxie!" he uttered in between thrusts, "I'm going to bust!" he moaned to me deeply while hot cum rushed up my pussy, "Oh, Jay!" I groaned while grabbing a fist full of rug hairs. He groaned too while holding onto my thighs.

A few moments went by and we stood up. There was no shame written on either of our faces. Could I be falling for my landlord? I got a towel from nearby and held it under my pussy to let his cum ooze out. He watched me clean up and put my robe back on, "Did you want to grab something to eat now?" he asked me sheepishly while putting his clothes back on. "Absolutely" I smiled.
